Alberta Best Yet

The Chronicle has received a letter from J. A. Ruggles who motored to Oskis, Minn., for a holiday and to visit relatives. The letter reads as follows:

"We are having nice weather here with an occasional rain which they did not have during the past summer; consequently there is a great shortage of feed and most of the stock has been disposed of through the channels devised by the National and state governments with small remuneration to the farmer.

In travelling through Montana and Dakotas it was plain to be seen that the drought situation had not been exaggerated in the least and the more I saw of it the better I liked Alberta and the Champion district."

What now is there to say. The letter expresses eloquently that we are not as bad off as we think we are.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of Grandma Gray who passed away October 21st, 1933.

This thou art gone, I feel your care is ever with us every where. Your presence seems to fill the air; I turn my head to find you there. You are not here, but yet you live in all the things that you did give. Most every place I look, I see Things that bring you back to me. Your staid dress hangs on the door.

I see the garden hat you wore And then a picture comes to me This is the picture that I see: Beans, greens and peas, row after row And you among them bending low to stoop to listen, I hear you say: Those all have got to be hoed to-day. Shall I go on and pick the peas Or shall I go ahead with these? And then I see you amid the flowers Where you spent many happy hours A working with some plant or pot. I seem your cares are all for got. You take a plant and look it over Like I have seen you do before. You give your head a little tip And then I hear the scissors snip. I turn my head to look, and then I see that you have trimmed again. Your picture smiles on me each day In just the same old loving way You used to smile, when you were here.

And ever gave us courage and cheer. Your lips just almost seem to ask, "What is to be my morning's task? Shall I make pie or fix the meat? No matter what, we've got to eat." Some overall, hang upon the line I see a patch with stitches fine And thru my tears again I see Those dear old hands that toiled for me.

Those hands that never seemed to be Too tired, to help the likes of me. They helped me over the roughest road And always bore the heaviest load. Dear hands—I think I feel them now Smooth out the wrinkles from my brow.

Your pocket-book, which used to be An Abolition Lamp, and a mystery It hangs in its accustomed place And once again I see your face; As opening up your pocket-book You feel inside, and then you look And saying as you search about "Here's a little night bag out," It never failed, I yet can't see How it could hold so much for me. The rug, that you for me once made New on my bedroom floor is laid On which I kneel to say my prayers When I go to Jesus with my cares. And when my heart is full of grief Its always there I find relief.

The word old shoes that you did send Across the road and I did send They rest so natural on the floor I feel your presence near and more. So every day you still abide This, you are gone, you're at our side Your presence clings around your chair I turn my head—Dear are you there? Mourned by all her loved ones.

WANT AND PLENTY PARADOX OF LIFE

Society Geared for Mass Production, Not Number of Dollars But Who Receives Them

(By Philip F. LaFollette)

In any form of civilized society there must be exchange. Capitalism, Communism and Socialism relate to the quantity and quality of goods and services provided various classes and individuals. Capitalism could use cash, and Communism credit, or vice versa. But credit and cash, each involve certain incidences. Where credit is used the total of capital debts will rise in an expanding society in direct proportion to the expansion in productive equipment. So long as the society continues to develop, the total of these debts will not be paid. Indeed, it is impossible to convert capital debts into cash where the system is founded on credit. In 1929 in a volume turnover of business in excess of 500 millions of dollars, the United States owed probably less than two and a half billions of dollars of cash. The balance was performed with checks and other credit instruments.

The mistake made by the sincere idealist is that he fails to see that (1) It is not a question alone of the volume of money or credit, but the speed of its circulation. A dollar bill that circulates one hundred times a day does greater service to a medium of exchange than a thousand dollar bills that circulate only once a month, or a million dollar bills that are in hoarding.

(2) The vital question is not the number of dollars, but who receives them. It will not help consumption of milk, butter, shoes, automobiles, or other goods if additional dollars go to those who already are consuming their limit. If a millionaire's income is increased, he does not eat or wear much more. Theoretically it would make no difference if he re-invested the surplus income in capital expenditures. But capitalists are not re-investing. The surplus incomes do not get into circulation. Private capital is not re-investing because investors do not see opportunity for profits in new capital investments. The cause for this lack of "confidence," as well as the cause of financial, economic and political collapses, is the lack of balance between capacity to produce and ability to consume.

Distribution of wealth is not a catch phrase of "left-wingers." It is basic in any vital economic system, no matter under what name it may go. In purely private capitalism the distribution takes place through re-investment by private individuals in new capital enterprises. Since 1929, private capital has been unwilling to discharge this essential economic function. At the same time it has insisted that the government shall not take its place. Our central problem is to restore the volume of exchange of goods and services. When the volume of exchange production. We have failed to see that we must operate it at the speed and volume for which it was designed. For five years vast herds of capital have thus been on strike. This strike has paralyzed the normal exchange of goods and services and brought suffering and ruin to millions.

The decision will be determined, I believe, by control of government. Let that institution to serve one hundred

We wonder which Indian reserve Fred Watts visited while on his holidays this summer. From the looks of the buckskin coat Fred wore, there must have been some excellent tailors on the reserve.

Two new homes are in the process of construction in the Bussan district. Oscar Gustafson and Ed Carlson are the two owners of the new homes being erected. J. W. Cain is in charge of both operations.

Oscar Gustafson had the misfortune to have an abrasion form in his hand. While working in his cellar a blister formed in his right hand. Poison gathered until it became very painful and an abscess formed. He is now under the care of the doctor, meantime carrying his arm in a sling.

C. R. Lucchia gave a demonstration of the Massey-Harris Hammer Mill model 25 on Tuesday, Oct. 18th. The new model performs excellent work in the opinion of the crowd that attended the demonstration.

Local & General

A meeting of delegates of Social Credit groups in surrounding districts was held on Thursday evening. C. Purcell and R. Maxwell from Champion, Messrs. Webster and McNaughton from Carmangay; Mr. Miller from Barons, J. Morley and T. Robson from Vulcan. The purpose of the meeting was to arrange for dates at these towns for speakers from Calgary. A winter program is being arranged whereby the Social Credit System may be more fully explained and points of difficulty explained.

P. W. Gatenby had the misfortune to wrench his knee while working in the elevator Tuesday. Coming down on the shift the brake slipped and Percy fell about twenty feet. He will be confined to his bed for a few days.

All students and ex-students of the Champion High School are invited to attend a party to be held in the basement of the Community Hall on Wednesday, Oct. 26th. Everyone is requested to costume, otherwise a penalty of 10c will be levied. The proceeds of the fines will be divided between the best girl's and boy's costume.

A committee has been appointed to take charge of the rural phone situation in the Bussan district. The committee is as follows: A. J. Miller, Chairman; H. McNaughton, Secretary; H. Matlock, F. Caldwell and N. Carlson. Anyone wanting information please get in touch with some member of the committee. A meeting of rural telephone subscribers and all interested will be held in the Bussan school on Friday, Oct. 26, at 8 o'clock.

and twenty millions of Americans, and through them the needs of civilization itself, or it is to be a defense for the greed and blindness of holders of holders of hoarded wealth?

The mass of people sense intuitively that their difficulties arise out of their inability to exchange. One cannot convince a farmer that there is need of slaughtering five million hogs. He knows that the unemployed on poor relief could eat that number for breakfast, and be ready for another five million for supper. The demand for "veterans" legislation, silver monetization, printing press money, and other demands for currency inflation get substantial support from those who feel for increasing people's ability to consume.
